With over 40 years of experience in the Dredging Industry, Ancil Taylor has acquired an in-depth knowledge of and hands-on experience with working on all types of dredges. From cutterheads, hopper dredges, dustpan dredges, agitation dredges, bucket dredges, as well as all the ancillary equipment related to dredges, Ancil is the individual to go to with dredging-related issues, including matters related to personnel and work crews. His comprehension and understanding of the science behind the designing, engineering and construction related to dredges are unsurpassed by others, which provides him an edge in improving the efficiency and effectiveness of various types of dredges. In addition, Ancil's ability to work with others, from management and project managers to boards and commissions, enables him to be very successful in achieving his goals and in explaining the processes related to dredging; and, he is the consummate professional and works extremely well with private and public partners in all levels of government. Consequently, Ancil, with all his experiences and knowledge, is highly coveted by others, and this explains why he has been invited to sit on several Industry-related Boards, enabling him to share his expertise in an advisory role.

Although I have only known Ancil for twenty years, I believe him to be an expert in the dredging industry and consider him to be an authority when it comes to dredging. Should you have any questions or desire any additional information, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,
